

Advanced Course

Gender-Responsive Budgeting

DATE: 9 - 13 October, 2017

LANGUAGE: English

TUITION: USD $1500

MODALITY: Face-to-Face

LOCATION: Belgrade, Serbia

BACKGROUND

Gender Responsive Budgeting (GRB) is a concept and a practical approach widely extended and used in developed and developing countries in the last 35 years. It can serve as a tool for achieving the triple goal of promoting development, enhancing gender equality and fulfilling human rights. UN Women supports efforts to ensure gender-responsive governance frameworks and expands its scope to engage with planning processes, to upscale the approaches and lessons learned and to institutionalize them within public administration at large.

OBJECTIVE

This face-to-face course aims to combine theory with hands-on training to develop technical skills for implementing specific Gender Responsive Budgeting tools related to governmental spending.

Upon completion of the training, participants will be able to:

- Discuss GRB in an holistic way
- Examine key elements for GRB such as actors, strategies, good practices and challenges implementing GRB
- Interpret how technical tools for GRB can be tailored to different contexts

AUDIENCE

The course will be of particular benefit to development practitioners including United Nations System staff, researchers, policy-makers, civil society and advocates who are working on gender mainstreaming in different spheres such as public policy, planning and budgeting.

REQUIREMENTS AND PREREQUISITES

Requirements:

- English language skills
- Interest in obtaining technical and training skills in GRB
- Commitment to devote 5 full days over the course of 1 week
- If possible, bring a laptop

Prerequisites:

- Proven experience in gender responsive budgeting: To enroll in the course, it is compulsory to demonstrate knowledge of GRB (i.e. academic or professional experience).

Click here to apply for the course (deadline: 27 June 2017).